COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Q. Will voice-activated recorders be turned on by phone line noise when a telephone is not in use?

A. Not normally. When properly installed and adjusted, the recorders rarely record between conversations. The Total Recall and TeleCorder recorders are designed for direct connection to phone lines and feature off hook sensing to prevent recording when the line is not in use.

Q. Is a periodic beep tone required to inform callers that a recording is being made?

A. Not in most applications. Federal law 90-351 title 18, section 2511, sub section 2D, requires that only one participant in a recorded conversation be informed of the recording. Check state and local laws.

Q. Can conversations on extension telephones be recorded?

A. Yes. As long as the extensions are in the same building as the recorder. Off-premise extensions, such as an answering service across town, would not normally be recorded.

Q. Is it necessary to have a technician install the recorders?

A. The recorders are normally easier to install than a FAX or TV.

Most installations involve either plugging into existing jacks or connecting a cable to the audio you wish to record.

Q. I have a multi-line telephone system. Can I record all conversations on all lines with one recorder?

A. Yes and No. You can connect to the handset of a multi-line phone or switchboard and record all calls regardless of which line is used. However, when the recorder is installed in this manner, calls made from or transferred to another telephone will not be recorded. If you wish to record all calls on all lines regardless of which extension is used, you have to record each line or extension individually.
